King David

Brief description: Single stained glass light depicting King David designed and made by William de Morgan circa 1870. King David playing stringed instrument.

The Old Testament King David was renowned for his ability as a harpist. Here, David is dressed in a green patterned robe with red trim, and gathers a white-and-gold wrap with red trim and pale blue lining around his shoulders. He holds a stringed instrument, perhaps a harp, with both hands and inclines his head towards it. He has a red halo and crown. The background is made up of blue diamond patterns, and he stands on a floor with fleur de Lys tiles. A broad border of cream glass with foliage patterns also frame the panel.
