Two cherub faces

Brief description: Stained glass depicting a cherub's head. Probably from the early 19th century.

This fragment of painted and enamelled glass depicts two rosy-cheeked cherubs, both looking to their right, with identical wide-set features, pale brown eyes, and small mouths. On the left, the cherub's wing stretches out beside him: the hair of a third cherub is just visible at the bottom. On the right, the cherub has a collar of feathers. They are depicted on a golden background.
