THE STAINED GLASS MUSEUM

Composite panel

Brief description: A composite panel containing an assortment of 18th century painted fragments (though not completely in the right order) The panel contains 18th century painted fragments which have been releaded after the original panel(s) had been damaged with moderate sized white glass in-fills.

A composite panel divided up into sixteen rough rectangles and painted in the chiaroscuro style. PGroups of figures with hands raised in surprise can be seen, and rays of light. The fragments are possibly from a scene depicting the Ascension or Transfiguration.
