

Scene of Nature

Brief description: A design for a stained glass window made up of three lights. The left light shows birds, a palm tree and vines at the top coming from the centre panel. The centre light depicts a tree with vines on, behind corn is growing. The right panel shows the vine from the centre panel. Below that is a sun with rays of light, below are crops growing. Designed by Heaton, Butler and Bayne

This detailed design by the nineteenth-century firm Heaton, Butler and Bayne shows three lancets depicting scenes of nature, birds, trees, vines and ears of corn. The agricultural and natural subjects make these designs suitable for both ecclesiastical and secular buildings. Although the majority of nineteenth-century stained glass was produced for religious buildings, there was also a great demand for stained glass windows in civic and domestic buildings. The main panels are framed at the top and bottom by ornamental panels with geometric patterns and foliage.
